

Tick resistant & easy calving

Boran cattle have adapted well to Australian conditions.

Small farmers considering the livestock options for their farm may ask, 'Why small Boran cattle?'

'The answer,' says Peter Jolly, President of the Australian Small Boran Cattle Association, 'is that they are designed by nature to be low maintenance, quiet small cattle. They are easy to handle and, if you desire, good to eat.'

'They are resistant to ticks and other parasites and are very much people orientated. They are true survivors that have proven themselves under "no holds barred" conditions. They are easy birthing cattle.'

'The Australia Small Boran Cattle Association is proud to represent these beautiful animals in south-east Queensland. Founded by Charlie and Linda Cox, we are a small group of very satisfied owners who would like to introduce these cattle to any interested cattle breeder or those people who are looking for a couple of friendly lawn mowers.'

'We are endeavouring to keep the size of the animal small to suit the needs of people on smaller acreages,' he says.

For further information contact Peter Jolly, President. 07 3399 9183. ■

Boran Cattle

- Small
- Tropical
- Good natured
- Low maintenance

Ph: 07 3399 9183 AH, 0448 523 618

Web: www.austsmallboran.com.au